Apollo's Cabinet presents

The Comic Muse

or The Theatrical World of Kitty Clive

Actress, soprano, and stage star Kitty Clive (1711-1785) had a unique command of London's theatre world of the 18th century. Born Catherine Raftor in 1711 and rising to fame as Mrs Clive, she negotiated the raucous, fast-moving, and sometimes unforgiving London scene with intelligence and grace. This show explores her world, shines a light on the vocal genres in which she excelled and celebrates the vibrancy of mid-18th century theatre performances through publications they inspired.

Presenting music sensation

Toby Barelli & King Size Slim

Over the past decade Toby Barelli has performed his unique rootsy sound across the UK and Europe, North Africa, south-east Asia and the Middle East.

"The band seethe and sway with that kind of easy camaraderie of musical veterans. There is a stripped-down drum kit and a honking, grinding sax adding to the ribald, darkly poetic swing. Barelli has form and his stagecraft is just impeccable."

Louder Than War

"King Size Slim practically set the venue on fire with their headline slot at the Edinburgh Jazz and Blues Festival. Real music delivered with no fuss. Exactly what was required to round off a great week of music."

Murder, Margaret and Me

by Philip Meeks

Agatha Christie, "the Queen of Crime", is not thrilled that her dearest creation, Miss Marple, is to be played by "the funniest woman alive", Margaret Rutherford. Rutherford, meanwhile, is mortified at the prospect of being involved with any film which depicts murder.

So what, Christie wonders, is the secret that Rutherford hid to ensure that her reputation remained intact? The two women form an unlikely friendship, helped along the way by a stranger who bears more than a passing resemblance to a certain detective.

Suitable for ages 12 and over.

The play will be performed in the round.

The Stables Theatre presents

The Cagebirds

by David Campton

The Cagebirds explores the effect of female stereotyping through the eyes of six characters. They are women. They are birds. They are prisoners of the Mistress. Self-absorbed, insular and isolated, they are reduced to caricatures to be feared and ridiculed. Their imprisonment has restricted them, divided them and left them without power. But the status quo is disrupted by the new addition of "The Wild One".

Directed by Vanessa Coatz

White Lead

by Jessica Siân

According to the Tate Gallery, 78% of galleries in London represent more men than women, while only 5% equally represent men and women.

White Lead is a short play exploring the expectations and responsibilities of being an artist and a woman. It was first performed at Hampstead Theatre, London, in 2016, as part of the Women Centre Stage festival, produced by Sphinx Theatre to demonstrate the range and richness of women's writing for the stage. In this play, power and vulnerability collide, as three women share their innermost thoughts over dinner: a dinner that no-one actually eats.

The Stables Theatre presents

By Henry James

Adapted and directed by Timothy Blackwell

A young man arrives at an isolated country house to be tutor to two angelic orphans. But the house holds dark secrets and evil threatens the children.

The disturbing, enigmatic heart of this tale continues to inspire generations of artists to produce adaptations – notably Benjamin Britten's 1954 opera and Jack Clayton's 1961 film, The Innocents.

Stephen King described The Turn of the Screw and The Haunting of Hill House by Shirley Jackson, as the only two great supernatural works of horror in a century.

Scenes some may find upsetting 12+

Henry James completed this gothic novella in 1898 while living at Lamb House in Rye.

Prologue Opera presents

Becoming Tosca

Have you ever seen a show and wondered about its characters' backstories? Becoming Tosca is a unique piece of drama, presenting the former lives of the characters, with every song and every word of dialogue bringing whole new insights into their backgrounds and choices.

Welcome to an evening of revolution, romance and tragedy, combining fresh music with a tango flavour and an abridged version of Puccini's sumptuous score. From the opening chords to the dramatic finale it will challenge your preconceptions of both the original piece and the art form of opera itself.
